ATHENS

When I reflect on my summer in Athens at the American School, I am amazed to recall how much we managed to fit into six all too short weeks. We began our acquaintance with Greece as one should; very early that first Monday morning we were on the Acropolis inside the Parthenon, looking for the traces of the reflecting pool and internal colonnade on the stylobate. As archaeology students we were granted special permission to go inside the Parthenon. It is now closed to the general public due to the damage simply caused by foot wear. Over the course of the summer and our several visits to the Acropolis we saw the molds being made for the Caryatids on the Porch of the Maidens; which will be replaced with casts, also due to wear and atmospheric damage.

Our first major excursion out of Athens was to Crete. Under the direction of our session leader, Dr. Merle K. Langdon, now of the University of Washington and author of the forthcoming HESPERIA supplement on the Zeus sanctuary on Mt. Hymettos, we visited three of the four major palace sites of the Minoan civilization so far uncovered, beginning with Sir Arthur Evans' excavation at Knossos.

One of the considerable benefits of attending a session at the American School is the chance to meet so many well-known scholars. We were privileged to hear Benjamin Merritt discuss his work with the Athenian tribute lists at the Epigraphical Museum. T. Leslie Shear, Jr., the present director of the American School's excavations in the Athenian Agora, led us through the site in some extremely interesting and valuable sessions. We also had the opportunity to meet informally with Oscar Broneer.

Our second trip out of Athens was known fondly as "the grueling Peloponnesian trip." Fortunately, Greece was enjoying one of its mildest summers in memory; we really suffered only at the Argive Heraeum and the Mycenaean fortress of Gla. Besides such expected

What program gives a classicist a chance to scale to the heights of the Pantheon one day and to descend to the depths of the dark and musty chambers beneath the Largo Argentina the next? The summer session of the American Academy in Rome, led this year by Professor Russell Scott of Bryn Mawr and Bernard Frischer of U.C. L.A., offered this and much more. The program was basically a survey of the historical development of Roman civilization from Neolithic times up to the Renaissance by means of the study of the archaeological remains found in the city of Rome and its environs. Our mornings were spent walking through museums and climbing over many well-known sites in Rome, while the afternoons and evenings were free to do additional readings in the vast Academy library or to shop and to enjoy modern Rome. During the six week course, we also made eight all day excursions to visit such beautiful places as the hills and lakes of Alban Latium, the uniquely different Etruscan cemeteries of Tarquinia and Caere, the Roman colonies of Alba Fucens set in the Apennines and of Cosa perched high over the Tyrrhenian Sea, the architecturally impressive remains of the Temple of Fortuna at Palestrina, the expansive remains of Hadrian's Villa at Tivoli as well as the seaport of ancient Rome at Ostia.

Though every day in this program had special events, examples of some of the most memorable stops as Mycenae (where George Mylonas spoke to us), Sparta, Olympia, and Corinth, we took time at Pylos to climb the island of Sphacteria through the thorns and the spiders to study the layout of this important battle during the Peloponnesian War.

By general consent the most beautiful spot we encountered was Delphi, on our central Greece excursion. The French excavation is out of sight of the modern village. The temple of Apollo, the treasuries, and the theatre sprawl in lonely grandeur along the mountain side. At night on one of the lonely mountain roads one could almost believe that pilgrims on their way to consult the oracle were striding beside us, the Castalian springs thronged, and the Pythia gibbering her prophecies in the temple.

We closed our summer with a visit to Apollo's sacred island of Delos, one tiny spot of bleach white amid the wine-dark sea. This summer was an invaluable introduction to the sites where Greek history was made. It's given me the desire to develop archaeology as one of my special fields in graduate school. I would love some day to return as a regular student to the American School. I am most grateful to Eta Sigma Phi for making this summer possible for me. It was a priceless opportunity.

RES GESTAE 1976-1977

ETA CHAPTER: (Florida State University)

After a business meeting and general planning, Eta Chapter opened the 75-76 academic year with a Halloween party featuring the reading of ghost stories from antiquity, including selections from the Golden Ass, the Odyssey, Theocritus, and an ancient Greek vampire tale. Our second party was held the Friday before final exams and was an informal spaghetti dinner at the home of our president for both students and faculty. Also during the Fall Quarter we hosted a group of high school students at a reception for potential classics students.

During the Winter Quarter, Eta hosted only one party open to all, which combined initiations with a reading of classical love poetry for Valentine's Day. Selections included Theocritus, Catullus, Homer, and the Carmina Burana. We also sent a delegate to the National Convention.

During the Spring Quarter, Eta held a business meeting to discuss the convention and to plan for our part in hosting a regional convention For the Archeological Society of America. We ran a reception for the convention and manned the registration tables. We also held a picnic for all students of the classics jointly with the local chapter of the Senior Classical League, and held an end of the year banquet at Lucy Ho's restaurant.

PSI (Vanderbilt University)

Most of our time has been taken up with the convention, but we have had two chapter meetings. At the first held in October, Dr. Blumenthal of the History Department spoke to us on classics in the Middle Ages; the second meeting was held in February and Dr. Aden of the English Department spoke on Horace. Wine and cheese were served following each speaker. We will be initiating new members and electing new officers in April, and we are also looking forward to our annual picnic, also to occur in April.

Lissa LeGrand Psi chapter

BETA BETA (Furman University)

Last spring four of our members attended the national convention in Tallahassee. When national officers were elected, Phil Stewart of our chapter was selected as Megas Chrysophylax. Our chapter has been quite busy with the publication of the Nuntius, under the leadership of Dr. Roy Lindahl, Editor.

Last spring Beta Beta offered Latin awards to outstanding Latin students in the Greenville high schools. We also had an informal drop-in at Dr. Lindahl's home for Classics students and Eta Sigma Phi members.

This winter we initiated five new members: Laura Provost, Lucy Delaney, Thomas Russell, Allison Cunningham, and Palmer Turnburke. Our chapter is designing a display for the library in April on the subject of Indo-European language relationships, and has initiated a new financial policy whereby we shall donate each year to the National Scholarship fund and to a fund to purchase books relating to Classics for our university library.

After our most recent business meeting we adjourned to a Greek restaurant in downtown Greenville for food and fun. We are happy to report that the Beta Beta chapter is thriving and moving forward in the most positive way.

BETA DELTA (University of Tennessee)

Beta Delta chapter at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville has held two well-attended meetings so far this year; both programs were connected in part with an extensive exhibit at the University Museum on the Dead Sea Scrolls. The first, presented by David C.

Dungan of the U.T. Department of Religious Studies, dealt with the siege of Masada, a Jewish fortress, by Roman legions in the first century, and, as a sidelight, the remains of the palace of Herod the Great, one of the early provincial kings under the Empire. The second program, by Lee Humphreys, also in Religious Studies at U.T., was concerned with the destruction of Jerusalem by the Emperor Titus during the Jewish revolt, and the repercussions of this event in Jewish society of the time. Members have also been active in attendance of campus meetings of the Archaeological Association of America. The chapter will close out the year with its annual initiation ceremony and banquet.

BETA ZETA (St. Louis University)

Our chapter the past year had a grand start with the election of one of our members, Kathleen Tohill, as the Megas Hyparchos at last year's convention. We have had monthly business meetings coinciding with various social activities. We started off the school year with a wiener roast at a nearby park with almost all of our members in attendance. Another of our meetings started with an iceskating party open to prospective candidates for membership followed by hot chocolate and cookies at the home of our advisor, Mrs. Carol Nisbet. We also held our Christmas party at Mrs. Nisbet's home. At the party we all participated in classical charades and sang Christmas carols in Latin. The business part of our gatherings centered around planning our High School Day. This year's theme is the "Relevance of Classical Culture to Twentieth Century Civilization." The program consists of three guest speakers discussing the impact of classical antiquity on the arts, the theatre, and legislative government; a tour of the campus; a Roman Banquet including entertainment in the form of mime, music, and classical drama interpretations; and an experience room showing the present existence of classical influence in our society.

BETA UPSILON
(Marshall University)

Beta Upsilon ended its 1975 spring semester with a review of our Department of Classical Studies by the American Philological Association. The favorable report of the APA strengthened our reputation as a healthy and prospering component of our university and added impetus to our 1975-76 academic year.

Our first task of this year was to establish our department in its new classroom and offices in the new academic building on campus. Although all necessary materials were moved and ready for the beginning of the fall semester, not until the end of the semester did we finish setting up our frieze in the classroom.

The annual high-school workshop held on October 11 was the most successful yet. In addition to our usual classes, we also provided a light luncheon for participants. The post-luncheon program consisted of slides and their explanation by our advisor, Professor Louise Hoy, who spent six weeks in Rome over the summer (June 26-August 6). We all enjoyed our vicarious trip to Rome.

Our Saturnalia festival was held on December 10 this year. As usual, our Classical Association helped us celebrate. Initiation this year was held on March 14 at the home of Professor Hoy; four new members were taken into our society and we plan to induct two more who were unable to attend the ceremony. Following dinner and the initiation we enjoyed a brief report given by a new member.

Two delegates, our advisor, and our advisor's husband are attending the national convention in Nashville; as usual, we take pleasure in contributing to the scholarship fund.

GAMMA ALPHA
(Indiana State University)

The Gamma Alpha Chapter of Eta Sigma Phi began the year with a manned display at freshman orientation to explain the purposes and activities of our organization.

At our first meeting of the year in September we featured John Elliott, an associate member, who presented a slide and talk show about his part in an archaeological dig at Porto Cheli, Greece during the summer of 1975.

In November, we held a small party at Bacchi's to interest new Classics students in Eta Sigma Phi and to help them get to know us better.

In February, we prepared a program of poetry reading including Ovid, Catullus, Sappho, and Horace for Indiana High School Foreign Languages Day. Unfortunately, inclement weather forced us to cancel our program until next year.

In March, we were fortunate to be able to send a delegate to the National Convention and were quite surprised when she came back as National Treasurer.

Throughout the year we have held regular business meetings at which we have revised our constitution, worked at improving our finances, and planned initiation.

At our initiation ceremony, which was held on March 25, we pledged six people initiated six people, and initiated one associate member. Our speaker was Dr. Polifrone from the Fine Arts Department, who spoke about music and musical instruments in ancient Greece and Rome.

March 30, we held elections for next year's officers, so we will have one more meeting at which we will install our new officers and hear Steve Osborne, who will present a program concerning ancient art.

Activities 1975-1976

September: Joined other Foreign Language honoraries in producing a Foreign Language display for visiting high school students who were considering attending Westminster.

October: Fall initiation meeting at which five students were initiated. The initiation was followed by an illustrated talk by the chapter's Prytanis, Georgia Mitsos, who reported on her summer travel in Greece.

December: Annual Christmas party hosted by the members of the Classics faculty, Dr. Castro and Dr. Turner, and their wives.

February: Spring initiation at which four new members were admitted.

March: Aided the Department of Foreign Languages in the annual Foreign Language Day.

April-May: Program planned to close year; Dr. Castro will give an illustrated talk on early Christianity in its classical environment.

Rick Clark

GAMMA OMICRON
(Monmouth College)

This year the membership of Gamma Omicron Chapter reached its lowest point, but we hope that this situation will change with the partial reinstatement of the foreign language requirement for graduation.

In spite of small numbers, our activities have continued. In November we sent a newsletter to all alumni of the chapter. In February we presented a half-hour program on Classics over WOC-TV in Davenport, Iowa. This month we are to have on campus Father Raymond V. Schoder of Loyola in Chicago, who will meet with some of our Greek and Latin classes and present his slide lecture on Greek art. We also initiated three new members this month. In April we shall have a Classics Day on campus for high school students.

We are also making plans for next year when Dr. Peter Arnott of Tufts University will visit us for several days with his marionette shows of Greek and Roman drama. And we shall again be hosts for the Illinois state Latin contest for high school students. Also, a graduating major in Latin is collaborating with our sponsor in a translation of "The Story of the Other Wise Man" into Latin. This should be ready for publication by early fall.

With one delegate attending this convention, we have an almost perfect record of participation in the national meetings. Last year was the only year in our entire existence when we did not have any student delegate present. And we were represented at that time by a trustee, Dr. Roy Lindahl, who graduated from Monmouth College.

We also have kept unbroken our tradition of contributing annually to the Scholarship Fund of Eta Sigma Phi.

Respectfully submitted,
Ann Polillo

DELTA ZETA

{Colgate University}

Our chapter's activities for the academic year have been highlighted by an elaborate ceremony at which nine new members were recognized.

Our own Dr. John E. Rexine, an honorary member, was then kind enough to share his thoughts with us in a lecture entitled "The Classical Tradition in the Poetry of George Seferis." This was followed by a lively reception and a hearty dinner for the new initiates. Professors Mary Lefkowitz from Wellesley and William Scott from Dartmouth, representatives of the Campus Advisory Service of the American Philological Association, were happily able to attend these festivities.

To date, we have hosted four visiting speakers. Dr. Bettie Forte from Hollins College delivered a lecture entitled, "How The Greeks Viewed Rome and The Romans."

Columbia's Dr. Morton Smith spoke concerning magical objects in Greco-Roman archaeology. Maurice Charlton from the University of Rochester Medical School voiced a unique perspective in his discussion entitled, "Why the Mind is in the Brain - A Greek Discovery." Most recently, Buffalo's John Peradatto addressed a Colgate audience concerning myth and modern theory. Each lecture was followed by a reception and dinner. Two major events are slated for the upcoming Spring semester. The College Year in Athens, an organization which is currently sponsoring one of our members, is planning to send a descriptive package of slides and literature to Colgate in the near future. We would like to combine the presentation of these slides with a lecture and a banquet. Our annual picnic is always a gala affair, and it may be even more so this year if we are able to arrange a joint outing with classics students from nearby Hamilton College. Hamilton has expressed a limited amount of interest in starting a chapter and their participation in our reveling might be just the thing to awaken their enthusiasm.

(George Washington University)

For the third consecutive year Epsilon Beta chapter has been honoured to have as guest speaker in a lecture series Bernard Knox, Director of the Center for Hellenic Studies of the Harvard University in Washington D.C. This year's subject has been Homer's Iliad. The weekend of March 20, Epsilon Beta chapter was pleased to assist in the production of a Latin Bowl. High school students from throughout Maryland, Virginia, and Washington D.C. area take part. Participation each year has increased, a sign of continuing and growing interest in Latin among area high schools.

Epsilon Epsilon Chapter has been quite active this year. On October 22, 1975, the group met to see slides of North Italy and Scandinavia, presented by Dr. R. Den Adel, Chapter Sponsor. On November 20, 1975, we were privileged to hear Professor Donald Martin discuss his recently-completed dissertation on manuscript transmissions. During the month of December, Rockford College presented a wassail hour in which students were asked to sing carols in different languages. On this occasion, members of Eta Sigma Phi sang carols in Latin. In order to cele-

Amendments Passed on Second Reading At The 48th Convention

1. Article XI, Section 1 Strike the word "undergraduate."
2. Article II, Section 1 a: add "and high schools" at the end of the sentence.
3. Article XIII, Section 1: add a substitution "a": A reinstatement fee of $10.00 shall be paid to the Grand Treasurer by each local chapter before reinstatement.

Amendments Passed On First Reading At The 48th Convention

1. Article XIII, Section 1, add subparagraph "b" (this involves designating the present material subparagraph "a"): A chapter petitioning for reactivation must present its petition and a fee of $10.00 in person at the National Convention. In cases of extreme hardship, the attendance requirement may be waived at the discretion of the Executive Secretary.
2. Article VIII, Section 5, add to subparagraph "f": At the discretion of the Executive Secretary, the duty of editing the Nuntius may be assigned to another individual with the same membership qualifications as the Executive Secretary, with the honorarium to be divided equally between the two.

Amendments Sent To Committee For Further Study

1. Article XI, Section 4: strike the present section and replace it with: Alumni and Life Alumni Membership.
a) Alumni membership shall include all members of this society not presently a student at a college or university. Alumni members shall not be eligible to hold the four undergraduate offices of this society. However, they may be elected to the Board of Trustees, to the office of Megas Presbyter, or such other office as the society may create and not prohibit them to hold, b) Upon payment of annual dues of $3.00 alumni members shall be entitled to receive the Nuntius and all other communications of this society, c) Life alumni membership shall be awarded upon a payment of $50.00 to the National Executive Secretary. Benefits of life alumni membership shall include exemption from annual alumni dues and a life subscription to the Nuntius.
2. Article VIII, add Section 6: Duties of the Megas Presbyter shall be to promote the interests of active graduate and alumni members, to advise the Executive Committee accordingly, and to perform such other duties as the Executive Committee shall appoint and as such officers normally perform.

DISCUSSION: A friendly amendment was proposed and accepted that the office of Megas Presbyter and the accompanying section on the duties be struck from the amendment. A motion was made and passed to table these amendments (Article XI, Section 4 and Article, Section 6) for a period of one year to clear up the ambiguity as to whether graduate students could hold office.

3. Article VII, Section 2: insert "undergraduate" after "All."

brate the Roman Lupercalia, members met on February 15, 1976, at a local Italian restaurant and treated themselves to a feast of their own choosing. On March 24, 1976, the chapter has scheduled for the general public two films, "The Rise of Greek Tragedy" and "Classical Comedy." Another event planned during the month of March is a lecture entitled "Myth or Folktale:

Perseus and Medusa," on the 29th. Other upcoming events include the initiation of new members and the election of new officers for the 1976-77 school year and the presentation of slides on Central Italy by Miss Sue Patrick, Guilford High School on the birthday of Rome, April 21. During this academic year, members also attended six Archaeological Institute of America lectures on the Rockford College campus. During the month of May the new members will receive their certificates of membership on the occasion of Honors Day.

ETA SIGMA PHI MEDALS

Eta Sigma Phi medals for honor students in second and fourth-year Latin are one of our best contacts with high school students of Classics. Chapters can use them as prizes in contests or in other ways to recognize achievement.

There are two silver medals available: the large silver (1 1/4 inches) at $12.00 and the small silver (1/2 inch) at $4.00. The bronze medal is also 1/4 inch and costs $3.00. Please add $1.00 total per order for postage and handling. It is suggested that the silver medals are appropriate for excellent fourth year work and the bronze for second year. (Perhaps the small silver could also serve for a third-year award.) Unfortunately, increased cost of materials has made the price increase mandatory.

If you are interested in using these medals, they may be ordered through Professor Raymond Den Adel at Rockford College. Checks should be payable to Eta Sigma Phi Medal Fund, and should accompany the order. Also, orders should be placed at least three weeks before the date desired.

occasions were when we climbed to the top of the Pantheon and gingerly slid over the roof to peer through the oculus at the miniature people below. While we sat on the roof surveying Rome from this wonderful vantage point, a sudden thunder storm arose sending us scurrying down the bell tower to see the rain came through the oculus, thereby giving us in one day's time a chance to see the famous drainage system at work as well as to marvel at the architectural achievement of this famous Hadrianic building from its roof. Another particularly thrilling experience occurred when we were tramping through the watermelon fields that cover the extensive remains of the Villa of Sette Bassi and Professor Scott found, quite by accident, an exquisite marble head of a votive statue. This was archaeology in action, and we experienced the same feeling when Professor Scott led us through the Roman colony of Cosa where he has been excavating for the past ten years. There is nothing like being treated to the beautiful remains of a Roman city by one of the men who knows it intimately.

In closing, I would like to say that though our group of college professors, graduate students, and high school teachers lived through the typical summer mishaps of sunburn, blistered feet, and wasp stings as well as the wonderful pleasures of modern day Rome, we all gained a very complete view of Roman civilization from not only the literary and historical standpoints, but also from the architectural and archaeological ones which could never have been obtained from classroom lectures or from the most scholarly of books. For this invaluable experience I will always be indebted to the members of Eta Sigma Phi.
